

The results of photosynthesis are surprisingly the starting materials of cellular respiration! To help plants breathe, they take in and let out oxygen. The opposite happens for animals; they take in oxygen through their respiratory systems and let me out.